New Program Spotlights Citizens' Support of Warfighters

The "America Supports You" program was launched by the Department of Defense in November as a tool to showcase the thousands of individuals, businesses and groups hosting events and undertaking projects to support America's Armed Forces.

By spotlighting the support of the American people, the program helps to build and sustain the morale of those fighting to defend America's freedom in addition to recognizing their courage and commitment to their country.

Projects already underway include marathons to raise money for charities that support military members and their families, making cookies with Armed Forces emblems emblazoned atop, rallies to honor troops, and a program to assist disabled veterans to regain their independence.

The program's website, www.americasupportsyou.mil, lists activities developed in support of American troops. Those who join the America Supports You Team by submitting information through the website are eligible to receive a military style America Supports You dog tag with chain.
